Kevin Graff founded Integrity Loan Review in October 2018 to remain focused and committed to community based financial institutions.

Although Integrity Loan Review is a new company, Kevin has been providing loan review, loan due diligence, credit administration and related services since 2009. His expertise in banking covers almost 30 years with a focus on commercial lending.

“I view my role as an extension of your risk management team to provide our experience and knowledge to your financial institution.”

Kevin has worked extensively within banking and accounting and has held leadership positions within these industries. Kevin has almost 30 years in the banking industry working in commercial lending. He spent approximately 18 years combined working for both M&I (now BMO Harris) and Chase as a commercial lender and division manager.

Kevin previously led the loan review team for a top 25 accounting and consulting firm. During that time, he developed specialized knowledge and procedures regarding loan review, loan portfolio due diligence, regulatory orders, loan policies, credit administration and field examinations. Kevin has led hundreds of loan review engagements and approximately 30 engagements assisting clients with the acquisition of a financial institution or loan portfolio.

Kevin has been a presenter for the Graduate School of Banking webinar series, the Wisconsin Lenders Symposium, Illinois Bankers Association, Community Bankers Association of Illinois, Indiana Bankers Association and the National Credit Union Administration.

Kevin earned a BBA in finance and an MBA with an emphasis in accounting from UW-Whitewater. Kevin has been a licensed CPA since 2009. He has held the RMA CRC designation since 2010. Kevin was recently a member of the Great Lakes Asset Corporation loan committee and is on the board of directors of the RMA Wisconsin Chapter. Kevin is also a member of the AICPA and the WICPA.
